INTRODUCTION

With the majority of news reporting occurring online, so much of it has been plagued with misinformation. It is important, then, to investigate how this affects public perceptions of major political conflicts.

One conflict we found extremely relevant in this conversation is the Israeli - Palestinian war. Through our project we want to emphasise the importance of finding trustworthy sources, especially when the discussion involves the casualties of innocent civilians.

Germany

Britain and America come between Germany and France in birth-rates and have comparatively low death-rates. For a simple comparison between private lives these rates are based on general population and take no account of age grouping. But more babies than coffins does not mean that the increase in population is going to continue. That depends on the proportion of women of reproductive age and their fertility.
